(3) Dependability. There is a dependence among the components that all of which may be subject to periodic failure probabilities for their time. For every time t , the failure probabilities that have occurred for dependent time prior to the considered instant are the same. When they are considered, these probabilities indicate any event they have occurred within the instant. Suppose that the event t has occurred, then any time after that, the event t cannot be used for future calculations and cannot be used again.
